PADDLING ADVENTURES ABOUND

he Wausau area features some great opportunities for paddling adventures, including a trio of river trails.

The Great Pinery Heritage Waterway is an overarching water trail that consists of three rivers located in Central Wisconsin. The Wisconsin River Trail is 108 miles in length starting at the Hat Rapids Dam in Oneida County and ending in Portage County at the Lake DuBay Dam. Portions of the trail hold scenic wonders as it flows over rapids and rock outcropping, through primeval pine and hardwood forest, and along the Ice Age Trail.

The great river is never far from the imagination of those in central Wisconsin. Fast flowing and scenic in its northern segments, the river becomes urban and industrialized as it flows south through cities that once had names such as Jenny Falls, Big Bull, and Little Bull Falls. The river has always been a gateway to the north, to the 'Great Pinery.'

Today, the Wisconsin river has returned to its beginnings offering the paddler an adventure not soon forgotten.

The Great Pinery Heritage Waterway is 108 miles in length with 24 designated landings along its length, passing through two state parks, state, and county forests, six dam portages, with primitive camping, wildlife and natural areas, hiking and biking trails that border its banks, amenities galore, historical bridges and dams, Class I-III rapids, adjoining Class I trout streams, and a Frank Lloyd Wright home along its banks.

The Lower Big Rib River Trail starts its 17 mile journey in Marathon City at Lions Park as it flows east to join the Wisconsin River at Bluegill Bay Park on Lake Wausau. Joshua Hathaway in his 1839 government survey of the lands bordering the Wisconsin River between Pointe Basse and Big Bull Falls mentioned the Big Rib River for the first

The river flows over sand and gravel bars and along heavily wooded banks that give the river an 'up north' feeling of seclusion and adventure. Heron, ducks, and deer are common along its banks and the river offers smallmouth bass and walleye for anglers.

The Lower Eau Claire River Water Trail stretches 17 miles with three landings along its length ending at Bluegill Bay Park in Rib Mountain

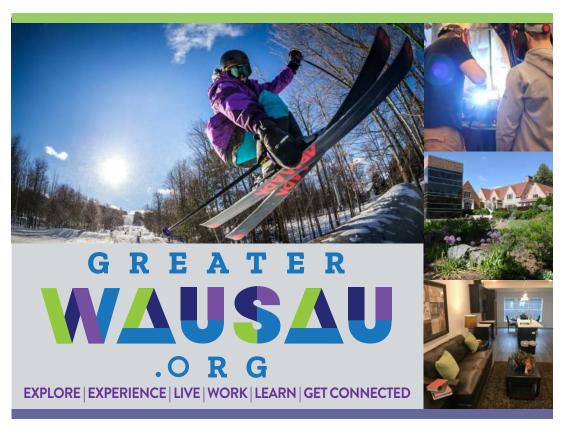

The Lower Eau Claire River Water Trail starts its 15 mile journey at the Clubhouse Road landing on the south side of the bridge and flows through boulder fields, and scenic landscapes before entering Lake Wausau just west of the historic Brooks and Ross dam. The trail passes by historical bridges, flowing through the Eau Claire River Conservancy giving the trail an Everglades-like feel as one paddles around cattails and reeds before exiting at the Drott Street Landing where one of the first sawmills in the Northwoods once stood.
